LATEST FROM GEN'L SCOTT'S ARMY. No news of any importance, indeed none upon which we could rely, has arrived here from our army, now stationed at Puebla, since that published in our paper of last week .-That, our readers will recollect, was up to the 30th of July, and left Gen'l Scott still at Puebla, with the expectation that he would move upon the city of Mexico during the first week of the present month. By this morning's (Thursday) mail we have

New Orleans papers up to the 20th inst. The steamer Galveston arrived at New Orleans on the 19th inst., bringing dates from Vera Cruz up to the 12th, and from Puebla up to the 6th of August. We have before us three letters, written by Mr. Kendall, one of the Editors of the Picavune, and dated at Puebla, the 3d, 5th, and 6th of August, respectively. The sum and substance of the intelligence by this arrival is, that General Scott had not moved from Puebla on the 6th inst.; but Mr Kendall, in his letter of the 6th, says positively that the first division of the American army would move on the next day, (7th) under the command of Gen'l Twiggs-that Gen'l Quitman's division would move on the 8th, Gen'l Worth's on the 9th, and Gen'l Pillow's on the 10th inst. Col. Childs would remain in command of Puebla.

Gen'l Pierce arrived at Gen'l Scott's headquarters on the 6th inst.

We cannot gather from this arrival any auand amount of resistance which our army may anticipate before entering the city of Mexico. Mr. Kendall thinks, from the information before him, that there will be some hard fighting, but believes that the result will be the triumphant entry of the American army, and that peace will soon follow.

Major Gaines and Midshipman Rogers had escaped from the city of Mexico, and had arrived at Gen'l Scott's headquarters.

The train which left Vera Cruz on the 6th inst., was attacked 24 miles from Vera Cruz, and a slight action ensued, in which our troops suffered some loss. Indeed, attacks were frequent, and it was anticipated that a severe engagement would take place at the National

We feel more than an ordinary interest in all that concerns this train, as the two companies raised in North Carolina (of the 12th Infantry) form a part of the escort.

Maj. Lally of the 9th Infantry was in command of the escort, as Col. Wilson was down with the Yellow Fever. We are, however glad to learn from a letter in the Picayune, that Col. Wilson was convalescent, and would soon be able to resume active duties.

RAIL ROAD MEETING AT WHITEVILLE. On Saturday last a respectable number of the people of Columbus county held a public meeting at Whiteville, the object of which was to forward that great enterprise, the Wilmington and Manchester Rail Road, a scheme in which the people of Columbus are so deeply interested. We have not been favored with any written account of the meeting, but learn, from a gentleman who was present, that it was a very respectable assemblage in point of numbers; and that the feeling which prevailed was of the most cheering and enthusiastic nature. Speeches were delivered by Messrs, M. London and H. Nutt, of Wilmington; and a considerable amount of stock was subscribed

MR. HILL'S ADDRESS. - We have peruse the Oration of "William Hill, Esq., delivered before the Washington Temperance Society of Richlands, Onslow County, on the 4th or July, 1847," with no ordinary pleasure. The address is published by the Committee of Arrangements. We congratulate our young townsman upon this effort. It is ornate, yet chaste, breathing throughout a spirit of the purest and most exalted patriotism, yet exempt from that fault too common with the youth ful orators of America-a vain and fulsome adulation of everything that belongs to our really great and happy country-even to the weakness and foibles of her people. It speaks a mind well stored with the choicest flowers of rhetoric, and yet endowed with a rare judgment in their selection and use. But as we intend shortly to spread the "Oration" before our readers, we will not detain them with any lengthened criticism.

THE LOVE OF MONEY .- There perhaps never has been a more striking illustration of the evil consequences of too great a love for money, than that afforded in the loss of the Swedish Barque Iduna. > QUEEN'S SPEECH .- Our readers may have some curiosity to know what kind of a speech Queen Victoria makes to her Parliament when she takes it into her little head to "chat" them "some." Her "speech" is made for similar purposes, and, indeed, corresponds in a great measure to the annual message of our President. Her Majesty delivers the speech in person, or rather, we would more correctly say, she reads it in person; for it is always prepared by her Ministers for her. We are glad to perceive that Her Majesty takes the right ground on the doctrine of Free Trade .-We have every reason to believe, from the results of the general election which is now going on in Great Britain, that she reflects the sentiments of a majority of the English people on this all-important question :-

A Beautiful Device .- When Lieut, Parker. who lately died at Vera Cruz, was a lad on board the frigate Constellation, which he joined in 1827 as a sailor boy, he wrote a letter to his father, in which after quoting the solemn passage of Scripture "Thou God seest me," he says, "I always recollected these words, father, and if every body did so they would never do wrong." In reference to this circumstance the words of Scripture have been engraved on the blade of the sword which was to have been presented to Lt. Parker by the citizens of Philadelphia, but which, since his death, has been given to his son. On the other side of the blade are inscribed these truthful and heart cheering words: "Fear not while acting justly."-[Southern Patriot.
